Behavioral strategy of the population of the Khabarovsk territory in the fight against poverty

The article is devoted to the analysis of the problem of poverty of the population of the Khabarovsk territory from the point of view of the objective and subjective approaches. Presented analysis is based on a sociological study and reflects the main trends taking place in the region. The article analyses the subjective assessments of the state of material situation, presents restrictions and actions that will be taken by the population to overcome the poverty. Based on the results of the study and the analysis carried out, behavioral strategies of the population of the Khabarovsk region to overcome the difficult life situations and combat poverty have been determined. Presented dynamics of the prevalence of different behavioral strategies to improve their material situation shows that not everyone can and is ready to adapt to the events and find a way out of the situation. The study also shows that the State-level measures are insufficient.
