
Zou Xutin – senior researcher, the Institute of Russia of the Heilongjiang Academy of social sciences (d.1000, Shi Bo Avenue, Harbin, 150028, PRC). E-mail: 1296547601@qq.com

China's economic development and its impact on Sino-Russian cooperation in the post-pandemic period

In the context of pandemic of the new coronavirus COVID-19, which swept the world in 2020, when the world economy was in recession, the Chinese economy, meanwhile, withstood pressure and showed high resilience and greater viability and became the first economy in the world to resume positive growth. A number of effective measures to combat the pandemic and socio-economic development policies contributed to the sustainable recovery of the China's economy. In 2020, despite many adverse factors, the Sino-Russian trade and economic cooperation as a whole maintained stable development with a slight decrease in trade volumes. Pragmatic cooperation between China and Russia has played a positive role in combating the negative impact of the pandemic.

Keywords: pandemic of new coronavirus, the Chinese economy, Sino-Russian, cooperation.

References:

1. Liu Kun Maintaining policies to reduce institutional taxes and fees [Electronic resource]. URL: https://www.sohu.com/a/454213222_123753 (In Chinese).
2. Sheng Laiyun: write an extraordinary exam answer in an extraordinary year – “Statistical Bulletin on the Social and Economic Development of the PRC for 2020” [Electronic resource]. URL: http://www.stats.gov.cn/tjsj/sjjd/202102/t20210228_1814157.html (In Chinese).

Reference to the article

Zou Xutin China's economic development and its impact on Sino-Russian cooperation in the post-pandemic period // Power and Administration in the East of Russia. 2021. No. 2 (95). Pp.8–16. DOI 10.22394/1818-4049-2021-95-2-8-16
