
The Far-Eastern federal district as an object of geo-selective regional policy of the Russian Federation

Olga V. Sidorenko

The Khabarovsk State University of Economics and Law, Khabarovsk, Russia, ovsidorenko@rambler.ru

Abstract. This study is based on the conceptual position that selective regional policy is an independent direction of the state's regional policy and its mechanism depends on the model of regional policy implemented in the country: «efficiency» or «equality». The theoretical and methodological foundations of the selective regional policy of the state have been supplemented, including: concept and types. Depending on the goals, two types of stimulating selective policies can be established: health-improving and geo-selective. A new direction of selective regional policy is revealed – geo-selective regional policy, which is a selective state influence by stimulating economic activity and improving the quality of life in geostrategic territories in order to ensure national security and territorial integrity of the state. It has been established that a special type of selective regional policy is being implemented in the Russian Federation, since geostrategic regions are the objects of incentives. The uniqueness of the Far-Eastern federal district lies in the fact that all the Far-Eastern constituent entities of the Russian Federation are classified as the priority geostrategic territories. On the example of the regions of the Far-Eastern federal district as the geostrategic territories, the mechanism of implementation of the geo-selective regional policy in the Russian Federation is shown.

Keywords: geo-selective regional policy, geostrategic regions, regions of the Far-Eastern federal district

For citation: Sidorenko O. V. The Far-Eastern federal district as an object of geo-selective regional policy of the Russian Federation // Power and Administration in the East of Russia. 2021. No. 4 (97). Pp. 65–71. <https://doi.org/10.22394/1818-4049-2021-97-4-65-71>